THERE ARE MANY WAYS TO SUCCEED.
PERCEPTION IS REALITY

The ever changing global economy means employers are actively searching for candidates with relevant, transferable and innovative skills to meet the challenges and opportunities of tomorrow.

Despite the Vocational Education and Training (VET) sector continuing to produce exceptional education and employment results for its graduates, this career pathway is not widely understood. There are many misconceptions surrounding the benefits and opportunities that an individual can gain by completing a VET qualification.

The VET Information Strategy will help Australians understand that VET qualifications may lead to successful, meaningful, professional careers with great salaries and outstanding career prospects.

CURRENT LANDSCAPE

Research commissioned to inform the VET Information Strategy indicated:

• Universities have significant exposure in comparison to the VET sector. Universities are presented as a unified and meaningful higher educational offering

• The acronym VET simply does not ‘work’ as a unifying brand for those who should know about it

• There is a market opportunity for the development of an online information hub for non-university higher education options

• There currently isn’t a unifying value proposition or tagline for the VET sector to help consumers readily, quickly and easily understand its pathway or potential opportunities.

Changing these perceptions takes time.
There is a need to act now to reframe how the VET sector communicates its key narrative and lay a strong foundation for a sustained communications approach at a national level.
WE HAVE AN OBJECTIVE: TO LEVEL THE EDUCATION PLAYING FIELD & CHANGE PERCEPTION OF VET

Communications across the entire sector must be unified, delivering specific key messages to ultimately change the negative perception in the Australian community that VET as an educational outcome is of “low-status”.

Communications must speak to each of the identified target audiences. These include:

• youth (aged 16-25)

• influencers of youth, such as family, career advisors, educators and job search providers

• adults seeking jobs, a career change, or re-entrance into the workforce (aged 25+)

• industry and the general public.

The VET Information Strategy is part of a government and sector wide partnership to redefine and elevate the perception of VET.

The VET Information Strategy is the first step to implementing a long term, considered approach by the Australian Government to:

• address and improve the negative perceptions of potential VET students and the general public who have low (and outdated) awareness of the benefits

• counter misunderstandings by improving government information resources about VET to end targets and stakeholders

• increase awareness and raise the profile of the range of VET opportunities and career pathways

• shift perceptions about the value and benefits of participation in, and completion of, industry focused training

• inform potential school leavers, jobseekers, employers and training providers of the new skills related government services available, including the Australian Apprenticeships Support Network

• inform prospective students, job seekers and employers about the availability of skills related government services including VET Student Loans, and address perceived misconceptions about VET.
The VET Information Strategy aims to improve the status and appeal of VET, encouraging participation in high quality training and education that meets the needs of industry and gives all Australians the best opportunity to succeed in their chosen occupation.
STRENGTH IN PARTNERSHIP
BUILDING A PARTNERSHIP

The Australian Government, together with state and territory governments, industry, educators, and training providers need to unite to send a clear and consistent message that real skills delivered by VET equals real careers.

To truly change the perception of VET, a bold and consistent strategy is important.

Collectively we need to convey a tone of ambition and achievement to potential VET students and their influencers and position VET as a personally, professionally and financially rewarding career choice.

Through a set of key messages and a unifying tagline we can help Australians realise that VET is uniquely positioned to deliver real skills for real careers.
BUILT TO SUCCEED & SHARE
COMMUNICATION STRATEGY

The Australian Government Department of Education and Training has created a communications tool kit to be used by stakeholders to help engage potential students with the VET sector.

It is designed to complement the marketing and communications strategies already in place by the stakeholders of VET.

The tools in the kit aim to:

• re-engage target audiences through a content marketing strategy
• deliver the content via digital channels and directly to the audience
• complement and enhance existing sector communications strategies
• set a tone of ambition and success
• tell the story of the great outcomes of VET, revealing the unexpected and surprising
• use a language and tone which elevates VET to a higher position in the minds of potential students.
KEEP IT POSITIVE
ADOPTING A NEW VOCABULARY

The words we use to describe VET have a powerful influence over the way that it is perceived.

How we describe the graduates of VET, and the career outcomes they attain has a large impact on perception.

Elevating the vocabulary will begin to reposition the sector.

For example, a career can be perceived as being more aspirational than other employment outcomes, and the term graduate has a perceived higher social status. It is not just a set of skills, it is a nationally recognised qualification.

Using improved language repeatedly over time will bust myths and position VET as a first choice study option.
The VET Information Strategy is a long-term sector wide plan to re-engage an audience through emotive content, success stories, options and outcomes.

It will be delivered across multiple communication channels. Each channel contributing to an overall message that aims to change the perception of VET.
STRATEGY IDENTITY

The real skills for real careers tagline captures the essence of VET.

It reflects that VET is industry led, and is in line with VET’s mission to deliver courses with outstanding employment prospects through the guidance of leading practice industry specialists.

The real skills for real careers tagline will unite us in how we describe and trumpet what a VET qualification can deliver.
Introducing character traits to the communications narrative helps to define each individual without focusing on academic outcomes and work-ready skills, this allows the visual language to form part of the story.

Through the character traits we affirm that there are many ways to succeed and that each individual can succeed their way.
There are many ways to succeed.
